EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

The Largest Private Employers in Boston: 2001

Policy Development and Research Department
Boston Redevelopment Authority
May, 2001
Revised August, 2001

- This survey has identified 58 private sector companies in the City of Boston that employ 500 people or more.
- The three largest industries among these employers, in terms of number of jobs, are: Health Care, F.I.R.E. (finance, insurance, and real estate), and Higher Education.
- The 58 largest private employers in Boston account for 144,797 jobs or about 24% of the total private sector employment in the city.
- The Health Care industry, and hospitals in particular, employs far more people than any other sector in Boston.
- With 14,907 employees, Massachusetts General Hospital is Boston's largest private employer.
- A manufacturer and a publisher also make the list: Gillette and Houghton Mifflin, respectively.
- 28% of the employees at Boston's largest companies are also Boston residents.
- 56% of the employees at Boston's largest companies have at least a four-year college degree and another 31% have some college education.
- One in five jobs are part-time positions.
- The slight tendency for Boston residents to be employed more on a part-time basis when compared to non-residents disappears when companies which hire more part- than full-time workers are removed.
- Employers who did not respond to this survey could add an estimated ten companies and over 15,000 employees to this list.

OVERVIEW

The Boston Redevelopment Authority (BRA) conducted a survey of Boston's largest employers during the latter half of the year 2000 and beginning of 2001. This survey is an update to a similar survey done in 1997 (report #509), which surveyed private sector companies with over 1,000 employees. This survey sought to identify:

- the largest private sector employers (over 500 employees),
- the number of employees working at their company sites within the city of Boston,
- the number of those employees residing in Boston, and
- the educational level of these Boston-based employees.

The survey identified 58 private sector companies that employ over 500 employees at sites located in Boston. (See Table 1.) Together, these 58 private sector employers provide 144,797 full- and part-time jobs - or almost one in every four persons working in the private sector in the city of Boston. The number of employees ranges from 14,907 employees at Massachusetts General Hospital (MGH) to 520 employees at AT&T Broadband. The industry sectors with the greatest number of large employers are Health Care, F.I.R.E. (finance, insurance and real estate), Higher Education, and Business and Professional services.

In addition to the 58 companies responding to the survey, we believe that there are at least ten more companies in the city of Boston with over 500 employees that did not respond to the survey. The non-responding companies with over 500 employees are shown at the bottom of Table 1, along with their number of employees as reported by the Boston Business Journal. The number for the Boston Globe is taken from the 1997 survey. Because these companies did not respond to the survey, they are not included in any of the other tables and analyses in this report.

Accompanying some is the number of employees as listed in the Boston Business Journal (except for the Boston Globe, which is taken from the 1997 report). The numbers shown, however, may not necessarily reflect employees in Boston alone.

A significant number of the jobs at Boston's largest private companies are part-time. Fifty-one of the 58 employers reported both full-time and part-time positions. These employers accounted for a total of 137,321 employees (95% of the total), of which 27,563 – 20%, or one in five - is part-time. (See Table 2.)

Six companies have more part-time than full-time employees: Shaws Supermarkets, Stop & Shop Supermarkets, the Back Bay Restaurant Group, the Visiting Nurses Association, Carney Hospital, and the Faulkner Hospital. An additional seven companies have workforces that are between 25% and 50% part-time: Brigham and Women's Hospital, Children's Hospital, Boston Medical Center, New England Medical Center, Northeastern University, Boston College, and St. Elizabeth's Medical Center.

THE LARGEST INDUSTRY SECTORS

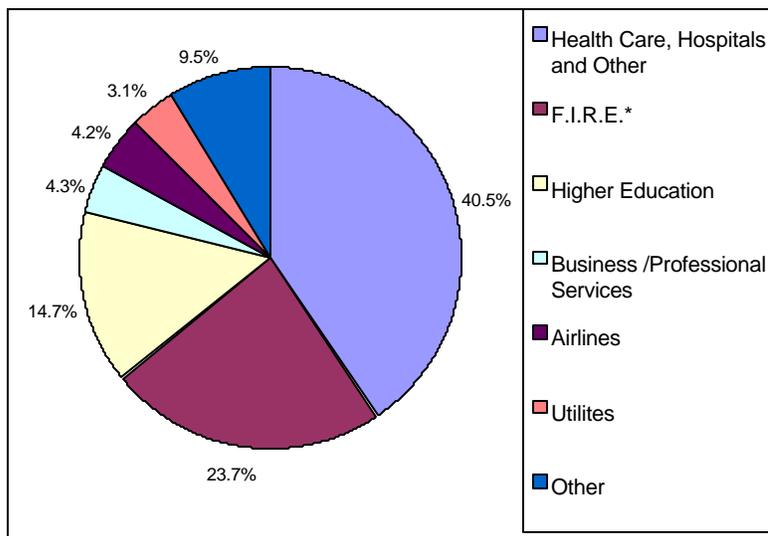

Health Care, Finance, Insurance, & Real Estate (F.I.R.E.), Higher Education, and Business and Professional Services are the dominant industry sectors within the city of Boston. Table 3 and Figure 1 below summarize the impact of those and other industries represented by Boston’s largest employers.

HEALTH CARE

Twelve hospitals in Boston have over 1,000 employees each. In fact, Massachusetts General Hospital, with 14,907 employees, is the largest private employer in the city. The third and fourth largest employers in the city are also hospitals - Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center with 8,568 employees and Brigham and Women's with 8,421 employees. Children's Hospital and New England Medical Center both have just over 5,000 employees each, ranking as the sixth and seventh largest employers in Boston. Boston Medical Center, St. Elizabeth's Medical Center, Dana Farber, Carney Hospital, Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary, Faulkner Hospital, and New England Baptist Hospital complete the list of Boston's largest hospitals. The remaining health care providers (Visiting Nurses Association and Blue Cross/Blue Shield) add another 1,752 jobs. As a result, the Health Care sector is the dominant source of private sector employment providing nearly 59,000 jobs, with the three largest institutions (among the private sector companies in the Health Care sector) alone providing 54% of the jobs.

FINANCE, INSURANCE, AND REAL ESTATE

The Finance, Insurance, and Real Estate sector (F.I.R.E.) employs the second largest number of people among the largest employers in the city of Boston. As Table 5 shows, there are 13 companies with over 500 employees in the F.I.R.E. sector.

Financial service companies dominate the F.I.R.E. sector in Boston with nine having over 500 employees; the remainder of the sector is made up of two insurance companies and two banks.

Fidelity Investments (FMR Corp.), a financial services company, is Boston's second largest private employer with 11,250 employees, and by far the largest employer in the F.I.R.E. sector. John Hancock, State Street Corp., and Massachusetts Financial Services round out the four largest financial services companies.

Fleet Boston Financial and the Federal Reserve Bank are Boston's largest banks, both employing over 1,000 people. New England Financial and Liberty Mutual are the city's largest insurance companies, with over 2,000 and 1,000 employees, respectively. Together, Boston's largest financial service companies, insurance companies, and banks employ over 34,000 people. (Not shown below are three more companies in the F.I.R.E. sector estimated to have over 500 employees, which did not respond to the survey: Commercial Union Insurance, Liberty Financial Company, and Citizens Bank.)

(financial services – 2,050), Commercial Union Insurance (insurance – 1,342), and Citizens Bank (bank – 733). Shown also is the number of employees as listed in the Boston Business Journal. That number, however, may not reflect employees in Boston alone.

HIGHER EDUCATION

Higher Education is the third largest private sector employer in the city. Five colleges and universities employ over 500 employees each in Boston, totaling 23,554 employees in the city. It should be noted that Boston College's total employment is included here, even though a portion of its campus is located outside the city of Boston. Boston University is the largest university in the city with a total of 8,297 employees. Ranking second is Harvard's schools of Business and Medicine, both located in Boston, and which together employ 4,557 people. Boston College and Northeastern University are also large institutions, employing over 3,700 and 3,800 employees, respectively. Of course, the large number of smaller colleges and universities in Boston and its periphery, add to the overall impact of the Higher Education sector on Boston's economy.

PROFESSIONAL AND BUSINESS SERVICES

The Professional and Business Services sector is another very large employment component of the Boston economy. As Table 7 shows, seven of these companies employ over 500 employees for a total of 6,258 employees. This sector includes five professional service companies (two law firms and three accounting/auditing firms) and two business service companies. The two large law firms, Goodwin Procter and Ropes and Gray, have over 900 employees each. The accounting/auditing firms - Arthur Anderson, Deloitte & Touche, and Ernst & Young - have 950, 905, and 829 employees, respectively. Concluding this industry sector are two large business services firms, Digitas, Inc. and Pinkerton Security, with 915 and 794 employees, respectively. (Not shown below are three more companies in the Professional and Business Services sector with over 500 employees, which did not respond to the survey: UNNICO Service, Pricewaterhouse Coopers, LLP, and Boston Consulting Group. According to the Boston Business Journal, these three companies, when combined, employ an additional 7,028 people in the business and professional services sector, more than doubling the total number of employees of large employers in that sector.)

Also shown are the numbers of employees as listed in the Boston Business Journal. That number, however, may not reflect employees in Boston alone.

OTHER LARGE EMPLOYERS

Eight other industry sectors are represented by companies with more than 500 employees. The airline sector has 5 airlines, operating out of Logan International Airport, that each employ over 500 people. The five airlines, in total employing just over 6,000 people, are led by Delta Airlines, with 1,782 employees. The retail sector includes one department store, Filene’s (Macy’s is believed to have over 500 employees but refused to respond to the survey), and two large grocery store chains, Shaw’s and Stop and Shop. Shaw’s Supermarkets, which has recently purchased the Star Market chain, is the largest retail employer in the city with 1,690 employees.

The hotel sector includes three large hotels located in Boston’s Back Bay area: the Boston Marriot Copley, the Sheraton Boston Hotel and Towers, and the Westin Hotel. The Boston Marriot Copley is the largest hotel with 957 employees.

In addition, two large manufacturers also made the list: Gillette Company, and a publisher of books, Houghton Mifflin. Gillette is by far the largest manufacturer in Boston, with 3,566 employees (another manufacturer located in Boston, Teradyne, Inc. did not respond to the survey, but has 1,800 employees according to the Boston Business Journal).

The utilities sector is also a large employer in Boston, with four companies in the city employing a total of 5,645 employees (in addition, Verizon is also believed to employ over 500 people in Boston but did not respond to the survey). The largest of the utility companies is Nstar (the former Boston Edison), an electricity provider with nearly 3,300 employees in Boston.

One newspaper, the Boston Herald, made the large employer list with 856 employees (the Boston Globe, which did not respond to the survey, showed employment of 2,250 people in the 1997 report.) Finally, there is one food service company in Boston with over 500 employees, the Back Bay Restaurant Group, which owns numerous restaurants in the city and employs a total 668 people, most of which are part-time.

EMPLOYMENT OF BOSTON RESIDENTS BY LARGE EMPLOYERS

Table 9 shows the listing of the largest employers that reported residency of their employees. Forty-five (78%) of the 58 companies responding provided data on how many of their employees were residents of Boston's 16 neighborhoods. These companies accounted for 127,288 jobs or 88% of the total surveyed.

On average, 28% of the employees of the largest private firms are also Boston residents. This percentage ranged from a high of 88% for the Back Bay Restaurant Group to a low of 6% reported by Keyspan.

In general, hospitals and other health care institutions have above average resident percentages. Of those reporting resident percentages, Massachusetts General Hospital was the only hospital below average (slightly) with 27% of its workers being Boston residents. Given its large size, Massachusetts General Hospital employs more Boston residents (4,096) than any private sector employer. Brigham and Woman's Hospital has the greatest proportion of Boston residents as employees among all the hospitals, 42%, translating to 3,524 employees.

Shaw's Supermarkets reports that 81% of their employees at Boston locations are also Boston residents, the second highest proportion. Pinkerton Security, the Boston Marriot Copley, the Visiting Nurses Association, Mellon Financial Company, and Faulkner Hospital also draw upon Boston residents for over 40% of their employees.

The companies with the lowest proportion of employees who are Boston residents are primarily in the Utilities sector and the F.I.R.E. and Professional Services sectors.

RESIDENCY AND FULL-TIME OR PART-TIME EMPLOYMENT

Forty-four employers (76% of all those responding) provided information on both the employees' residency in Boston and full- or part-time employment. The results (Table 10) show that this sub-population of the largest employers represents 124,813 jobs or 86% of the total reported by all 58 companies.

Table 10 – Nature of Employment in Companies Reporting Boston Residency

Employment	Number of Boston Residents	Number of Non-Boston Residents	Total
Full-Time	27,706	73,618	101,324
Part-Time	7,090	16,399	23,489
Total	36,265	90,017	124,813

This sub-set of data is quite similar to the complete set of full-time and part-time employment data shown earlier in Table 2, with about 19% of these employees working part time. There is, however, a very slight tendency for Boston residents to be employed more on a part-time basis when compared to non-residents. As shown in Table 11, Boston residents constituted 30% of the part-time employees in these largest companies, whereas they made up 27% of the full-time employees. On the other hand, non-residents made up only 70% of the part-time workers but 73% of the full-time employees.

Table 11 – Relationship Between Residency and Full-Time or Part-Time Employment

	Boston Residents	Non-Boston Residents
	(% of Employment)	(% of Employment)
Employment			Total
Full-Time	27%	73%	100
Part-Time	30%	70%	100

The difference is very small and can be explained by the high proportion of total employees that are part-time in a few companies that employ a great proportion of city residents as their employees, namely Shaw’s Supermarkets and the Back Bay Restaurant Group.

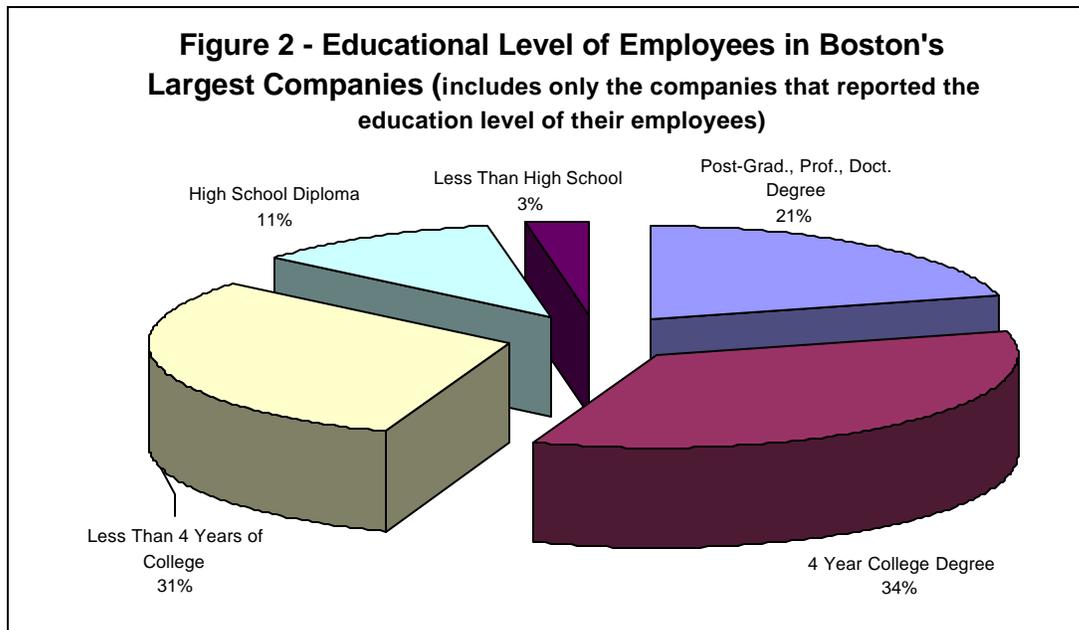

EDUCATIONAL ATTAINMENT OF LARGEST EMPLOYERS’ WORKFORCE

Only 30 (52%) of the 58 largest employers responded to the question concerning the educational levels of their employees in Boston, and many of those responses were estimates. Based upon these responses, on average, roughly 86% of the employees at Boston’s largest companies have some level of college education -- 35% have a college degree, 21% have an additional post-graduate, professional, or doctoral degree, and another 31% of the employees have some college experience. Just over 11% of the Boston based employees have only attained a high school diploma and only 2.7% have less than a high school education. (See Table 12 and Figure 2.)

Table 12 – Educational Level of Employees in Boston’s Largest Companies
(includes only the companies that reported education levels of their employees)

Education Level	No. of Employees	Percent of Employees
Post-Graduate, Professional, or Doctoral Degree	19,551	20.8%
4 Year College Degree	32,609	34.7%
Less Than 4 Years of College	28,683	30.5%
High School Diploma	10,590	11.3%
Less Than High School	2,539	2.7%
Total Employees	93,972	100.0%

The companies with the highest percentage of employees with less than a high school diploma are the Back Bay Restaurant Group and Carney Hospital, both at 10% of their total employees. A few other hospitals, namely New England Baptist Hospital and New England Medical Center, also employ a higher than average number of people with less than a high school education, 7% and 5%, respectively.

The companies with the greatest percentage of employees with 4-year college degrees are clustered in the Professional Services and Financial Service sectors. Mellon Financial Company leads this category with 80% of its Boston based employees having at least a 4-year college education.

Universities and hospitals employ the largest percentage of people with post-graduate, professional or doctoral degrees, because of the large number of medical professionals required by these institutions.

APPENDIX

SURVEY DESIGN AND QUESTIONNAIRE

Drawing upon such resources as previous BRA large employer surveys, Dun and Bradstreet, and the Boston Business Journal, a list of Boston's largest private companies was compiled. Beginning in the summer of 2000, a one-page questionnaire was then mailed to these companies believed to have close to, or in excess of, 500 Boston-based employees. To assist companies in the sorting and identification of appropriate data, a map of Boston zip code areas and a list of all zip codes for Boston's downtown and neighborhoods were included in the mailing. After extensive follow-up by mail, telephone, and fax 85% of the companies responded. Fifty-eight of the questionnaires came from companies employing more than 500 workers within the city of Boston.

Of the 58 companies identified with more than 500 employees:

- 51 employers (88%) responded to the question about full- or part-time employment. These employers accounted for 137,321 employees or 95% of the total 144,797 reported by all 58 companies.
- 45 employers (78%) responded to the question concerning residency of their employees. These firms employed 127,288 or 88% of the total employment.
- 44 employers (76%) provided information on both the employees' residency in Boston and full- or part-time employment. This sub-population of the largest employers represents 124,813 jobs or 86% of the total reported by all 58 companies.
- Only 30 (52%) of the 58 largest employers, accounting for 93,972 or 65% of the total employees, responded to the question concerning the educational levels of their employees in Boston.
